

To: Access to Cash
cc:

I use the web site of my bank for many transactions but there are some which cannot be done on line. I therefore see the following needs:-

1) To draw cash - free ATMs will serve this need if available 24/7

2) To pay in cash and cheques - This really needs access to a counter. Either banks will need to have "Agents" who can do this. My bank used to have one in our town but not now or they will need to co-operate and have a branch in every town and large village. This could be manned in rotation, one day a week, by staff from the nearest branch [or employ part time staff for the purpose. Perhaps ex-staff who are now home parents might be a source.]

For this last, I see no technical difficulty as at my branch they scan my debit card to access my account when I want to do things at the counter.

Regards,

Alan Gordon [aged 85 and have given up the car!]

From:

A.M.Gordon, BA, MSc, DMS, DIC,

Author of:

Practical Programming for Non-Computer Professionals - Pub:NCC

Superprogrammer - Programming in ANSI Standard Basic - Pub: Sigma

Software Quality Assurance Model Procedures - Pub IEE